

SVS beats
Comm
for base football trophy- The Mosquito applauds season

In front of a frosted flock of faithful fans, SVS remained unscathed in play-off competition and reclaimed their crown from last season on Wednesday night, but not without a serious scare in an incredible final match up against the Communicators. The Mosquito would have loved to see it all come down to the wire in a second game, but given two great teams that played fantastic ball until the clock ran out, you really couldn't ask for anything more out of a base Super Bowl...except maybe some mega nachos and a half time show!

Brick wall defense on both teams dominated nearly the entire first half, leaving the scoreboard blank and offensive teams antsy to make the first mark. Comm did well to maintain balanced coverage and was quick to squash the majority of SVS quick rushing plays. However, when one did sneak by, SVS made sure to capitalize. A 35-yard breakaway gave SVS the lead, capped off by a 50-yard punt return to the end zone by the speedy SVS commander himself. The Mosquito was honestly looking to see if he has been secretly using a pair of roller skates to breeze down the field; definitely not the first time a defense couldn't catch this man and he makes it look easy every time. See ya, wouldn't wanna be ya!

In response, Comm's offense was not afraid to bank on their passing game, running several big plays down-field which, although gutsy, was a great crowd pleaser. With 26 seconds left in the first half, their risks paid off with a 40-yard completion in the end zone leaving Comm trailing SVS by only six points.

Meanwhile, the Mosquito was impressed that action in the stands was just as entertaining as that on the field. While Comm managed to max out the weight capacity on those metal bleachers, SVS revealed their musical talent with their very own makeshift orchestra. In case you're wondering why you drank out of paper cups in the O'Malley, rest assured that those metal water jugs were serving a noble purpose (also might explain why there's a few dents in them at supper tonight).

The Mosquito didn't have to break out the old-school physics books to understand that Comm stole the game's momentum in the second half. One taste of the end zone brought Comm back for seconds and thirds for a potential 21-13 steal.

However, after recovering from the shock (and relieving themselves of a few whines), SVS regained control of the game and tied with a critical 2-point completion. Comm made their final drive for the end zone with plenty of time to extend the championships into a second rematch. Yet, after missing a crucial fourth down attempt, SVS went for the kill before overtime could grant Comm another shot.

And so when fans thought the "fat lady" was still keeping warm in the Jet Stream, she appeared with her songbook with only 12 seconds left on the scoreboard as SVS passed to the end zone and emerged victorious with a 27-21 final score.

An awesome finale completes the Mosquito's idea of a perfect season.

Yet, there are a few other things that have made it even better: Ammo fans clanging on homemade gongs in the bleachers, the gut hope that your team can either hold on or come back when there's only seconds left on the clock, and everyday people who play for no more than the love of the game (in addition to bragging rights at the bowling alley and around the office). With that in mind, the Mosquito is glad to see that what makes football great is alive and well here at "the Kun." And the crowd goes wild...
